Innovations in Policing Domestic Violence: An Evolving Arena of Law Enforcement

Violence Against Women and Children: An Evolving Arena of Law Enforcement

Police Innovation David Weisburd 2006-05-04 Over the last three decades American policing has gone through a period of significant change and innovation. In what is a relatively short historical time frame the police began to reconsider their fundamental mission, the nature of the core strategies of policing, and the character of their relationships with the communities that they serve. This volume brings together leading scholars to examine eight major innovations which emerged during this period: community policing, broken windows policing, problem-oriented policing, pulling lever policing, third party policing, hot spots policing, computer and violence-based policing. Including advocates and critics of each of the eight police innovations, this comprehensive book assesses the evidence of impacts on police innovation on crime and public safety, the extent of the implementation of these new approaches in police departments, and the limitations these approaches have revealed for police management. This book will appeal to students, scholars and researchers.

New Visions of Crime Victims-Caroline HYDE 2002-02-14 This innovative collection presents original theoretical and empirical research on criminal victimization. The first part of the book challenges conventional typologies of victimization, focusing on non-traditional victims of crime, such as male victims of domestic violence, victims of male-on-male rape, institutional victims and the "victims-who-are" who are occupants of SRA punished violence. The second part of the volume considers criminal justice responses to victimization. Chapters examine the perspectives of victims who become involved in court, probation and reentry processes. This book will further delve on how we conceptualize victims and their appropriate role in the criminal justice system.

Responding to Domestic Violence-Ezra SUZUKI 2013-10-10 This new edition of the benchmark Responding to Domestic Violence explores the response to domestic violence today, not only by the criminal justice system, but also by public and non-profit social services and health care agencies. After providing a brief theoretical overview of the causes of domestic violence and its prevalence in our society, the authors cover such topics as battered women, violence against intimate partners, criminal justice, intervention, family violence, social service intervention, and domestic violence. In addition, this edition provides an in-depth discussion of the concepts of coercive control in domestic violence and an in-depth understanding in victim needs. Finally, this volume includes international perspectives in order to broaden the reader's understanding of alternative responses to the problem of domestic violence.

Combating Intimate Partner Violence Through Policing Practices: Mueller-Kleuter KIKOULOS 2014 Since the early 1980's intimate partner violence has been a focal point of many political and social movements and has been widely acknowledged as a significant public health problem. This book reports the findings of the overall study and highlights the main themes and research findings from each of the seven countries.

Policing Violence in Singapore: Ganapathy Narayanan 2006 "Why do some years of police reform in Singapore not produce significant changes in improving the policing of marital violence" is the fundamental question raised by this volume. Carefully exploring the response to marital violence in Singapore, while paying due attention to the particular culture and historical context in place, the authors address the question of the problem of intimate violence. The book goes on to examine the social factors that underpin the crime of marital violence, particularly the issues of pressure, safety and protection of victims from such violence. A careful documentation of the reform process, but also the extent to which violence has been reduced within the population, especially for the female population.
