Drinking with Dead Women Writers-Elaine Ambrose 2012-05 Humorous essays on drinking with Dorothy Parker, Louisa May Alcott, Jane Austen, Erma Bombeck, The Bronte Sisters, Willa Cather, Emily Dickinson, George Eliot, Margaret Mead, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Margaret Mitchell, Carson McCullers, Flannery O'Connor, Sylvia Plath, Ayn Rand and Virginia Woolf. Most early female writers used pen names because women weren’t regarded as competent writers. Margaret Mitchell wrote only one published novel in her lifetime, but Gone with the Wind won the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in 1937 and sold more than 30 million copies. Emily Dickinson was so paranoid that she only spoke to people from behind a door. Carson McCullers wrote The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter at age 22. Her husband wanted them to commit suicide in the French countryside, but she refused. Ambrose and Turner explore these and other intriguing facts about the most famous (but departed) women in literary history.

Color Me Healthy-William Campbell Douglass 2003-06-01
“He's crazy!” “He's got to be a quack!” “Who gave this guy his medical license?” “He's a nut case!” In case you're wondering, those are the reactions you'll probably get if you show your doctor this report. I know the idea of healing many common ailments simply by exposing them to colored light sounds far-fetched, but when you see the evidence, you'll agree that color is truly an amazing medical breakthrough. When I first heard the stories, I reacted much the same way. But the evidence so convinced me, that I had to try color therapy in my practice. My results were truly amazing. I know it's hard to believe, but color therapy really works. And not just for external wounds. It also works for many internal ailments at which modern medicine just throws useless drugs and surgery.

The Joy of Mature Sex and How to Be a Better Lover-William Campbell Douglass 2003-06-01 To be quite honest, we don't really know much about human sex. If fact, most of us seem downright confused about it. If you don't believe me, just look at corporate America. Every office in this great country is filled with tension between the sexes. You really can’t appreciate this unless you've experienced it. It’s a mess! The report you are about to read is not a morality book, nor is it politically correct. It's simply a frank discussion on a subject that most people find interesting, but very confusing. In trying to sort out many of the myths and misunderstandings about sex, I have attempted to put some humor into the subject of sex. It lends itself to humor and, of course, to pathos as well. Humans are very confused about what makes good sex. But I believe humans have more to offer each other than this total licentiousness common among animals. We're talking about mature sex. The kind of sex that made this country great. - William Campbell Douglass II, MD
